EXTENDING CITY LIMITS.

Kirschner's Hall, Wednes ; evening, Views of Stephen C. Collins or the Question.

The City of Oregon voted itself in the Pourth Class, with no territory or commons, for it nev-er had any. Then, how will it extend or radius the limits of the city territory under Section

4932 of Revised Statutes? The city of Oregon can never get one foot larger, except in the following way: By purchase; by denation; or by condemning-when the necessity is great and paying therefor; or y some proprietor of adjoining lands volunta-Big rily laying off a part of his land as an addition to the city. A corporation cannot exercise arbitrary power under our exitin of government. If a city could extend its fimils at will, why has all the laws governing corporations this section to coad-mn and pay a just compensation? Be cause the Constitution of the United States says it saist be done when the public wants private property for public use. All State laws and Constitutions must conform to this behest of the United States Constitution.

Now, suppose Russel, two years since, had donated fifty acres of his and of the south side of the city, some farming and pastoral land, and, last April, the city voted its limits around that common or territory that Russel gave them for that purpose—now the coming April the city wants to reduce the territory of the city, and, at the same time, wants to extend the city lim-A the Holt County Teachers Institute as by the same vote. And, when taking this vote, the city wants to extend the piatted limits over the remaining twenty-five acros, which is the only city proper. The city is going to lay it off as an addition or extension of the city, all voted for at the same time, as Section 1932 R. S. says. But the same section says, all lands used for farm ing or pastoral purposes shall not be taxed for or sale, been reduced to tracts or lots of five acres or less. Why does this section, 400 say this? Because the city will not tax its own common property. A city is only known by its Frod Drate, What a he greatest recorded plat.
